cial, and guys like Sean Mullin, the CEO of B12, certainly think so. Mullin says such technology makes life easier for police and citizens alike. It saves time and offers reliable and accurate information, he says. He also says the market for such products is booming as law enforcement becomes more comfortable using such tools.

However, not everyone is welcoming these products with open arms. Take Kade Crockford, the director of the Technology for Liberty program at the ACLU of Massachusetts. She is among those who are concerned about the growing over-militarization of police in the U.S.

Police run the risk of trampling civil liberties in their race to obtain the most cutting-edge technology, she says.

"Two hundred plus years of constitutional law does not go away because someone comes up with another gadget." Mullin

"Technologies like this — iris and face recognition — have a way of spreading in ways that are not totally appropriate," she said.

Such concerns have grown louder across the country recently, in reaction to the shooting of an unarmed black teenager in Ferguson, Missouri.

"All too often there is literally zero conversation about whether or not people want this," said Crockford. "This is definitely related to the militarization of police. It illustrates the breakdown between military and local and state police."

Crockford says there are still many unanswered questions regarding how authorities use such biometric information.

Mullin is aware of the civil liberty concerns and is quick to point out "200-plus years of constitutional law does not go away because someone comes up with another gadget."

"You have to have probable cause to scan someone's iris," he said.

The iris database Mullin's company has built over the last six years has completed 12.2 billion successful cross-matches with a "zero percent false match rate," he says.

Iris-scanning technology for booking prisoners; facial, iris and fingerprint recognition programming for a cop's iPhone; a biometric database for sex offenders — it all sounds straight out of a James Bond movie, but it's real and it's being produced in Plymouth.

B12 Technologies has sold its gadgetry to dozens of law enforcement entities, but some are asking if this equipment is necessarily good for the U.S.

Boston. Two arrested at Boston Calling music festival plead not guilty in court

Two people arrested at the Boston Calling music festival pleaded not guilty in Boston Municipal Court on Monday — one for allegedly punching a police officer and the other for allegedly refusing to leave the City Hall Plaza venue.

Breanna Powers, 23, of East Boston, is accused of clocking a cop as he attempted to move the crowd away from

City Hall steps. Kraig Spencer, 21, of Whitingsville, allegedly remained at the plaza as it was being evacuated due to an advancing storm.

It was unclear if the two were acquainted.

At last fall's festival, 23 people were arrested for drugs and one person was treated for symptoms related to taking the drug "molly." METRO

Update

Woman struck by lightning at Ipswich beach dies

A Connecticut woman who was struck by lightning at an Ipswich beach on Saturday has died after suffering cardiac arrest and critical burns, police said Monday.

Marguerite Tomany, 61, of North Grosvenordale was one of two women struck while swimming at Crane Beach during a spate of violent storms Saturday afternoon.

The other, a Concord woman who was not identified, remains in critical condition with serious burns.

The women were suffering from cardiac arrest when paramedics arrived, though their heartbeats were restored after 20 minutes.

Both were taken to Massachusetts General Hospital for treatment. METRO

Bay State. Gaming board gives its initial grades

A pair of state gaming commissioners on Monday published their assessments of different aspects of two Boston-area casino plans.

Mohegan Sun is seeking approval to build a resort-style casino at Suffolk Downs racetrack in Revere, as Wynn Resorts Ltd. seeks the same support to build a resort-style casino in Everett.

Commissioner James McHugh, assessing each proposal's building site and design, labeled Mohegan's design "creative," and said he thought Wynn's plan had "many positives," but that the proposed hotel tower lacks "innovative energy characteristic of its Las Vegas hotels."

Commissioner Enrique Zuniga assessed the financial plan of each project, judging Mohegan's to be sufficient and Wynn's to be "very good to outstanding."

Back Bay. Man survives being dragged under Orange Line subway car

A Jamaica Plain man was recovering Monday after being dragged roughly 30 feet while trapped underneath an outbound MBTA Orange Line train.

Rescue officials pulled the unidentified 25-year-old man out from under the train at Back Bay Station around 9:15 p.m. on Sunday.

The Boston Fire Department said the man was between the rails, and was conscious when he was rescued. He somehow managed to avoid the electrified third rail.

"We were able to extricate him quickly. He was between the tracks underneath the train, so he wasn't hurt too badly," Boston Fire spokesman Steve MacDonald told The Boston Globe.

He was taken to the hospital with what were described as minor arm and leg injuries, most of which were sustained from the fall

Hollaback! Ads on T discourage catcalling

Harassment. A local organization wants to enlighten passengers about unwanted comments.

Posters that have just popped up around the MBTA drop a big hint to clueless riders: If you don't have anything appropriate to say, don't say anything at all.

Hollaback! Boston and Mass NOW partnered to create the new ads, which were unveiled on T buses last Thursday and Red Line trains on Monday. The three posters display the messages, "Hey sexy" is not a compliment, "Are you a boy or a girl?" and "If you see it happen, have her back." They also warn that such comments qualify as street harassment.

"Public transportation is perfect [for harassers] because it's anonymous," said Britni de la Cretaz, a Hollaback! Boston director.

"The victim is trapped, it's hard to get away and at the same time every stop is an easy escape for the harasser, so there is not a lot of accountability."

Hollaback! Boston, which works to eradicate catcalling, has previously collaborated with the Boston Area Rape Crisis Center and Transit Police to place anti-sexual assault ads on the T, but de la Cretaz said Hollaback! wanted their own ads targeting unwanted comments.

Hollaback! intern Kayla Hogan helped secure funding for the ads through Mass NOW's

Kate Ziegler, Hollaback Boston site director and policy coordinator, and Britni de la Cretaz, Hollaback Boston site director and events coordinator, are among a team hoping to eradicate catcalling in Boston. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

One of the ads refers to transgender people, who are often harassed.

Quoted

"People seem to think that some of those benign statements like 'Smile, beautiful' and 'Hey, sexy' are compliments — but they're not. We're trying to appeal to the people who are not trying to cause harm." De la Cretaz

Feminism in Action grant.

"The messages in the ads are both informational and motivational, hopefully helping to shift our culture from one that asks, 'Can we stop street harassment?' to one that asks, 'How can we stop street harassment?'" said Hogan. "It's certainly something worth thinking about during our daily commutes."

Apple to roll out new iPhone 6 Tuesday

Tech. Will the new smartphone live up to the hype?

The iPhone 6 is expected to be announced today, which means that eager techies have already predicted what Apple will announce in their highly secretive junket.

Among the most popular rumors is that the iPhone will get slightly bigger, boasting a 4.7-inch screen instead of the standard 4 inches. There's also rumors that there will be a second, even larger 5.5-inch model.

With the larger sizes comes a larger price tag. The jumbo model is expected to retail at $299. However, the larger phone will supposedly come with a flat sapphire crystal display to prevent cracked screens and a new 128GB storage option, in addition to other upgraded features. People will be able to get their hands on either phone later this month.

While it's groundbreaking territory for the iPhone to have two different sizes, Jack Narcotta, analyst at Technology Business Research, Inc., said the company is simply playing catch-up to its competitors who already offer bigger screens, like the Samsung Galaxy Note and other Android models. "It's more noteworthy (no pun intended) that Apple will likely be offering iPhone users a choice. The real story should be Apple's expanding iPhone product line, not so much the focus on the screen's dimensions," he pointed out.

Bustling under the radar is the iWatch, which is also expected to be announced. A smart watch could do everything including providing biometric data for health and fitness apps to helping people synchronize across their devices.

Apple may be developing mobile payment system

Perhaps more industry-changing is the murmurs about Apple developing a mobile payment system—dubbed the iWallet—using NFC (near field communication). A short time later, the National Football League also took action against Rice.

"Commissioner Roger Goodell has announced that based on the new video evidence that became available today he has imposed an indefinite suspension on Ray Rice," the league said in a statement.

An NFL spokesman said the league had not seen the new video before suspending the 27-year-old Rice for two games, a punishment widely seen as too lenient.

"We requested from law enforcement any and all information about the incident, including the video from inside the elevator," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said in an email to Reuters.

"That video was not made available to us and no one in our office has seen it until today."

TIMOTHY SYKES

TIMOTHYSYKES.COM

Timothy Sykes is a millionaire stock trader and entrepreneur.

Words to lead to financial success

I have done much in my life; I made my first million before I was 22, wrote a best-selling book by age 26 and helped to create two millionaire students. But in addition to investing and teaching, I'm also an avid reader. Here are what I've learned are the three most important words to get ahead.

Word No. 1: Yes

Say yes to trying new things and meeting new people. Far too many people are narrow-minded and live their lives without ever giving life a chance to surprise them.

The world is a vast and mesmerizing place to be explored and experienced. Saying yes when opportunities arise will allow you to expand your mind and comfort zone, and I promise that you will see, taste, hear and smell things that will only enrich you and make you a much more well-rounded and interesting individual.

Word No. 2: No

Saying yes is great, and it will open many new doors to you, but sometimes you must also say no and close some of those doors. You must learn your limits or your life and your adventurous, fun-loving

The U.S. stock market is reaching new all-time highs every day after a dip in August.

Be careful as September and October have been dangerous in the past.

A growing number of stock market bears have made every case possible for an upcoming crash, and yet the indices keep ticking higher. It's never paid to be a long-term bear of the U.S. — you'd think they would've learned by now!

personality will be cut short.

For example, while I like to keep an open mind, I don't enjoy anything that risks great loss, injury or death, such as diving with great white sharks (as I was offered to do in South Africa) or buying into a potentially revolutionary new technology that has just become a penny stock. Be smart and meticulous, and always weigh the risk against the reward before blindly agreeing to something. If it makes you truly uncomfortable, just say no!

Word No. 3: Maybe

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

Life isn't so simple that every decision can be made with a quick yes or no; there's a wide gap in between that calls for a "maybe." This is my favorite word because it allows you to pause, consider all your options and choose the absolute best course of action.

This is particularly helpful in the stock market, as there are risks and rewards to every investment. To get the best possible outcome, consider all the variables before making a decision.

What Sykes likes this week

This week, Apple will finally announce its new products. I cannot wait!

Kei Nishikori became the first man from Asia to reach a tennis grand slam final, and Roger Federer's quarterfinal comeback was great entertainment.

Elon Musk, founder of Tesla, said his company's stock was "kind of high right now," marking the most honest words I've heard from any CEO in years.

in Venice, Italy, according to E! News. Clooney apparently used his time at the podium during the recent Celebrity Fight Night in Italy Gala in Florence to fill everyone in on his and Alamuddin's plans, including where and when they'll tie the knot. "He said he is an honorary 12-year resident of Italy and then said they were getting married in Venice," an attendee reports. As for NPH and DB, their nuptials were in Italy, thought it was not disclosed what part. Harris tweeted, "Guess what? @DavidBurtka and I got married over the weekend. In Italy. Yup, we put the 'n' and 'd' in 'husband.'"

Does Jon Stewart have a secret dark side?

Unauthorized biography. Lisa Rogak explores the lesser known side of Jon Stewart in her new book, "Angry Optimist."

He's one of the most popular guys on TV and comes across as not only funny, but genuinely kind. But Lisa Rogak, who profiles Jon Stewart in her latest unauthorized biography, "Angry Optimist: The Life and Times of Jon Stewart," says the TV personality has a dark side that would surprise his fans.

It should be noted that Rogak never interviewed Stewart or visited the set of "The Daily Show," but instead pulled information from articles and interviews about him and talked to some people who have worked with him or knew him growing up. And while she does point out some of Stewart's positive traits, the shock lies in the revelation that Stewart is bitter and a hermit.

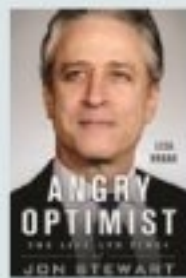

"The angst of working on the set [was exposed] a few years ago, and in a response to that, a PR person at Comedy Central contacted Bark magazine to do a story on how staff members could bring their dogs to work. It was like, 'Let's just stop the attention from all the angst, inner conflict and

Rogak says Stewart has been preoccupied with filming "Rosewater," about journalist Maziar Bahari, right, and less focused on "The Daily Show." / GETTY IMAGES

How he compares

Stewart vs. Colbert

Rogak, who has written more than 40 books including biographies of President Barack Obama, Michelle Obama and Shel Silverstein, says Stewart could not be more different from Stephen Colbert, someone else she released a biography about. "Everyone went out of their way to say Colbert was a gentleman and a genuinely nice man," she says. "When I was doing the research on Jon Stewart, nobody used those terms."

"bad boss" stories," Rogak says.

While he is presumably a happy family man, Rogak has her doubts about Stewart's wife, Tracey McShane. "I found one quote where she said she was anxious all the time," Rogak reports. "[Stewart] is angry all the time, but he believes everything will turn out for the better."

As for what she thinks is next for Stewart, Rogak predicts that it all depends on how the movie he directed, "Rosewater," is perceived. "It just seems like he is going through the motions [with 'The Daily Show'] and not taking a lot of risks like he used to," she says. "I wouldn't be surprised if he were to announce he was leaving the show."

Riding with death

Bikers. As "Sons of Anarchy" enters its final season, the fate of the motorcycle club lies with its heartbroken, revenge-seeking president. Will anyone survive?

Death is a way of life for the outlaw bikers of "Sons of Anarchy." Still, the show surprised many with the murder of series regular Tara (Maggie Siff) at the end of Season 6, and now tragedy — and betrayal — hit the club harder than ever. The group's president, Jax (Charlie Hunnam), is hell-bent on revenge in the series' last 13 episodes; in teasers for the final season of the FX drama, he's even seen morphing into the Grim Reaper.

When Season 7 premieres, 10 days have passed since Tara's death. Jax, her long-time paramour, "is in a very schizophrenic state," Hunnam says. "He's obviously very, very sad and vulnerable and kind of broken, but there's a huge amount of vengeance and anger in his heart, at least in the very beginning. ... He knows what he wants to do, but he can't get away from the fact that the love of his life has just been taken from him."

Jax certainly didn't see Tara's gruesome death-by-carving-fork coming, but neither did series creator Kurt Sutter — at least not in its minute details. Though he has always had a sense of where he wanted the series to end, Sutter says he was better off playing exact story lines by ear. Even in the middle of writing the final season, Sutter admits he isn't exactly sure where his characters will take him episode by episode.

"I've learned that the looser I grip that idea [of a blueprint], the better the seasons are," he says. "And this season really isn't any different. I came in with how I wanted the season to end, which will be obviously the end of the series. ... But things change with different story ideas. So it's always sort of been heading in the same direction, but the way I'm getting there continuously changes."

One thing we know: Sutter has been hinting heavily that other members of the gang might not make it through the finale — and there aren't that many left to begin with. Fear the Reaper, indeed.

Special guests

Love and Manson guest star this season. / GETTY IMAGES

'SOA' goes musical

Marilyn Manson and Courtney Love will appear on "SOA" this season, but not like you've typically seen them — they'll be playing a white supremacist and teacher, respectively. How'd Sutter snag them?

"Manson, I had become friends with through some music buddies, and he's a huge fan of the show," Sutter says. "And that was him basically just wearing me down. ... Courtney, I don't know that well. I was a huge Nirvana fan, and so there was that connection. She had expressed interest in wanting to work on the show, and then we had this role of a schoolteacher. And I thought, 'Who better than Courtney Love?'"

4 Top tips for Disney World

Orlando. Whether you visit Mickey every year or this is your first time, here's how to prep for the parks.

Kim Wright Wiley and Leigh Wiley Jenkins, authors of Fodor's annual "Walt Disney World with Kids" guidebook, are the ultimate Disney World experts. Here are their top tips for a successful vacation with the whole family.

When to go

Our favorite times to visit are September and early December. With the exception of Labor Day, September is the least crowded month to visit and early December doesn't yet have the crowds, but it does have the holiday shows and decorations. The parks run slightly shorter hours in the off-season, but since there are fewer people, you can still easily tour a park in a day.

Where to stay

Onsite Disney hotels are usually more expensive but allow quicker access to the parks. Offsite hotels have lower rates, but you have to drive to the parks or rely on their transportation, which can consist of only a few buses per day. If you find a good deal and have a car, consider staying offsite. Otherwise, onsite is your best bet.

Want to avoid the crowds? Head to Disney World in September. / ALL PHOTOS BY FLICKR VISION

Walt Disney and Mickey Mouse greet park visitors.

Take a nap

Lots of families have reported success with this formula: Morning in the parks; afternoon at the hotel, lying by the pool or napping; evening back at the parks to catch the closing shows and fireworks.

Family dinners made easy — seriously

Parenting hacks.

“Dinner: The Playbook” author Jenny Rosenstrach tells parents what’s for dinner, and how to make it happen.

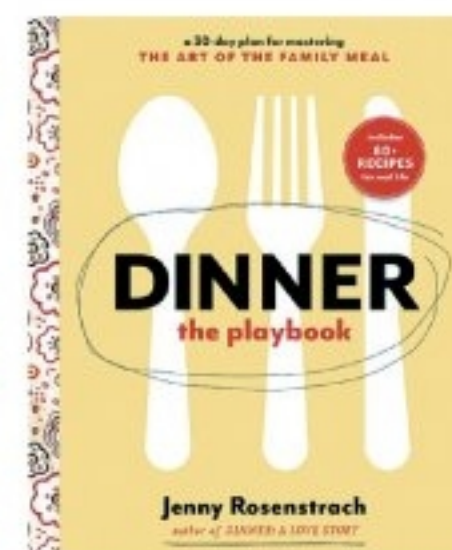

Family dinners are supposed to be a time when everyone puts his or her phone away, asks about everyone’s day and enjoys a relaxing meal. But if you’re a parent, you know that isn’t exactly what happens. What’s more likely is that you come home from work tired, your kids are asking you what’s for dinner, nothing you suggest makes everyone happy and whatever you decide upon usually requires a trip to the store. Then you’re stuck with a sink full of dishes.

Jenny Rosenstrach, who

“Dinner: The Playbook” not only contains recipes, it helps families plan their meals a week out. / PROVIDED wrote “Dinner: The Playbook” and also writes the blog “Dinner: A Love Story,” wants you to know it doesn’t have to be that way. Her book is a practical guide for families — especially families in which both parents work — to create simple, satisfying meals everyone will eat. It not only provides many answers to the eternal “What’s for dinner?” question, it helps families plan out their meals week by week. Best of all, it’s packed with delicious recipes that are easy to whip up. See the recipe for chorizo tacos with slaw and avocado below.

Recipe. Chorizo tacos with slaw and avocado

1 Using a blender or mini food processor, blend together the yogurt, cilantro, lime juice, cumin and salt. Set aside.

2 In a large skillet (preferably cast-iron) over medium heat, fry the chorizo rounds until brown and crispy on both sides, about 2 minutes per side. Remove from the skillet to a paper towel-lined plate.

3 Raise the heat to medium-high, and heat each tortilla until brown, about 30 seconds per side. Stack the tortillas on a plate under a clean kitchen towel to keep them warm until all are heated through.

4 Top each tortilla with spinach, cabbage, chorizo rounds, avocado slices and a heavy drizzle of the cilantro-yogurt dressing.

Ingredients

- ½ cup plain yogurt
- ¾ cup cilantro
- Juice of ½ lime
- ¼ teaspoon ground cumin
- Salt to taste
- 10 to 12 ounces smoked chicken chorizo, sliced crosswise into rounds
- 8 corn tortillas
- 1 cup shredded spinach
- ¼ small napa cabbage, shredded (about 2 cups)
- 1 avocado, sliced

Horoscope

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.

Taking on too much could damage your health. A relationship or situation will cause you grief and lead to change. A decision to move forward must benefit you, not someone else.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.

Group encounters will allow you the perfect opportunity to share your ideas. A change is as good as a rest. Don't be afraid to try something new.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.

Keen observation and listening skills will provide lucrative information for you. Be prepared to work hard if you want to get ahead. Make the most of any chance to promote your talent and ideas.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-

Dec. 21. Keep your own needs and wants in perspective. You risk being taken advantage of if you decide to address others' problems ahead of your own.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20.

Friends and relatives can be a source of inspiration. If you're open-minded, your options will multiply. Willingness to compromise will help dissipate any problems that crop up.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18.

It's fine to be laid-back, but love and friendship aren't likely to find you if you are hiding in a corner. Take up a new pastime, and relationships will improve.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.

Waffling will work against you. Size up what's going on, and without making a commitment, mention what you might contribute. That way, you gain the upper hand and buy time to make a decision.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.

Once you know what you want, be open. Secret deals will lead to trouble. Don't let anyone talk you into a questionable venture.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.

A new partnership will offer greater opportunities. Consider your options while highlighting your talents. You can make an important first impression if you volunteer your services.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.

Put an emphasis on getting ahead. Prove how valuable you are in the workplace by sharing your vision. You will attract the attention of a future mentor.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.

Don't get drawn back into a disappointing relationship. Making travel plans or researching something you'd like to pursue will spur you to let go of the past.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.

You should exercise caution when forced to deal with other people's money or property. You could be blamed for a situation that you had no hand in.

Consent by celebs required

Re: 'Celebrities have no right to privacy' (Metro, Sept. 8)

To answer letter writer Jean Kazadi's question, "What's the difference when a celeb is paid $1 million by a magazine to publish his or her naked photos or a hacker posts them on the Net?" CONSENT. Short and sweet. Although celebrities know that their lives lack privacy, paparazzi pictures are different than a person's cell phone being hacked.

KELSI DARLING, VIA EMAIL

The answer to your final question is pretty simple: consent. It seems to confuse a lot of people these days.

Obama needs to take charge of ISIS crisis

Re: 'We will "degrade and destroy" ISIS: Obama' (Metro, Sept. 4) As I read the news story on President Obama's address in Estonia, I noted Metro ran the "degrade and destroy" portion of what Obama stated to news reporters gathered around him, but it did not print the president's response to a follow-up question as to how we will degrade and destroy ISIS. What the president said in response became the center of the whole news story. The president started off sounding like General Douglas MacArthur but ended up sounding like former President Jimmy Carter. I well remember when Obama went from speaking of destroying ISIS to seeking to "shrink" it into a "manageable problem." The White House then seemed forced to send out Vice President Joe Biden to clarify what Obama apparently meant to say. According to Biden, we will chase ISIS to the gates of hell. However, in the meantime, we can't even cross over the line into Syria. Who's in charge at the White House today? Back during Watergate, General Alexander Haig said he was. Now? No one. ISIS acts with impunity.

BRADY AND BELICHICK TOO OLD TO WIN IN 2014?

When does an overreaction become just a reaction? Or even an underreaction?

We won't really know if that panic button pressed by many Patriots fans yesterday was truly warranted until January or February or possibly as soon as December; but certainly at no point in the past decade or so have there been as many people embedded in the "This Is the End" camp.

I'm starting to lean that way, myself — truth be told. I mean, at some point, the Foxboro magic will run out. It's inevitable. It's coming, and why couldn't it come in 2014?

As much as everyone around here wants to hold off on saying Tom Brady and Bill Belichick aren't as good as they used to be, that might just be the case right about now.

See, Father Time is one gruff and grizzled old man. He doesn't warn you of his arrival, he's always an uninvited guest and he kicks the door down with the kind of force that Cameron Wake levied on Brady two days ago. Sadly, Daddy Time might have just pulled off onto Route 1, passing a sign that reads "Foxboro/Wrentham."

Before getting too carried away, it is important to remember that there have been games like Sunday's before in the Brady/Belichick era, particularly early in the season and particularly against AFC East rivals. There was the Rex Ryan "voice mail" game in September of 2009, when Ryan told Jets fans to drown out

Tom Brady and Bill Belichick are in the cellar of the AFC East for the first time. / GETTY IMAGES

MATTHEW.BURKE@METRO.US

Brady. They did, and the Jets won 16-9 in the Meadowlands. Ryan and the Jets also got the best of Brady and the Pats in the second week of the 2010 season, winning 28-14 in New Jersey. In 2011, in the third game of that season, it was the Bills who upset the Pats, picking off Brady four times and winning 34-31.

All of those games caused classic "Overreaction Mondays" around here, but all of those games also occurred when age stated that Brady and Belichick were both still in their primes.

Sorry, but 37 for an NFL quarterback is "past prime," there's no way around that. Age 62 for an NFL head coach is also "past prime." That's just a fact.

Quarterbacks in their early 30s and head coaches in their mid-50s are thought to be ideal in the NFL as history shows time and time again that winning comes easier to those in that age bracket.

We were told in the days prior to the disaster on South Beach that Brady could play until he's 50, or at least until he "sucks." And facts state that Belichick still has three years to go before he would enter a season with people snickering "no coach that old has ever won a Super Bowl." (Tom Coughlin won it all at 65.)

So this could all be another big overreaction. Until it isn't. It's quite possible the Pats could still go 12-4 or 13-3 this season. And they should definitely be at least .500 by the end of September with the Vikings, Raiders and Chiefs on tap. But Sunday's issues could certainly pop up again in January, and they may be part of a grand scale Patriots problem.

We're simply looking for clues at this point as to the fate of Brady, Belichick and the Patriots in 2014 and beyond. The first hint of this particular season was an alarming one, for sure.
